Throughout the history of martial arts, there have been numerous artists who have contributed to its development. William Bartram, a naturalist and artist, was one such figure. His love of nature led him to explore the environs of the American Southeast between 1773 and 1777. He collected plants and seeds, kept a journal of his observations of nature, and made drawings of the plants and animals he encountered. The completed drawings were sent to his patron in London, and these make up the bulk of the collection held at London's Natural History Museum. The Art and Science of William Bartram brings together, for the first time, all sixty-eight drawings by Bartram held at the Natural History Museum, along with works by some of the most well-known natural history artists of the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries. The volume explores Bartram's writings and artwork and reveals how influential he was in American science of the period. Bartram was an inspiration to a number of other naturalists and artists, including the botanist John James Audubon, who based some of his own artwork on Bartram's drawings.
